Skirting The Generation Gap

It appears that one notable generation gap - on the distaff side, at any rate - is between thigh and knee. A recent public opinion poll found that for the most part the women are separated from the girls by the few inches that distinguish the miniskirt from the more conservative midi length.

The study used that significant age, 30, for the dividing point. Older women, it turned out, generally prefer skirts that stop at the knee or even below. "At or near the knee" is their cry. The under-30 girls generally are still inclined to show lots of leg. For them the miniskirt is still "in."

The survey turned up some other points of interest. Minis are twice as popular in the East and Far West as in other parts of the country. More than half of the men asked about girl-watching aspects of the matter expressed a preference for the "at-the-knee" length - but 64 per cent of the men under 30 voted for the miniskirt.

It all says something, but we're not quite sure what. - West Point (Miss.) Daily Times Leader

Dressing Up

People invited to a $100 per plate fund raising dinner for California legislative candidates were startled to find a footnote: "Roquefort dressing 25 cents extra."

Call It Like It Is

"Adult" bookstores? "Adult" movies? How far does the game of euphemism carry us? Adult is not synonymous with pornography in our book. As adults we resent the implication it is.

Pornographic bookstores? All right, call them that. Pornographic movies? All right, too. But in a day of tell-it-like-it-is truth-seeking, we don't have to stomach the dodge of calling emporiums of smut "adult" bookshops and "adult" movies. - New Orleans (La.) Times-Picayune

Pressure on Jews in Russia Is Evident

NEW YORK (AP) — The case against the Soviet Jews convicted of planning to hijack a plane to get to Israel points up the Soviet Union's mounting pressures on its Jewish population.

Most of the recent campaign has been cloaked in anti-Israel terms tied to Soviet support of Arab forces in the Middle East. But it also has produced sharp tensions between the Soviet government and Jewish citizens.

"Never before has the Soviet press published so many anti-Israel, anti-Zionist and anti-Semitic articles," says the Rev. Blahoslav S. Hurby. He edits a journal documenting the trend, Religion in Communist Dominated Areas.

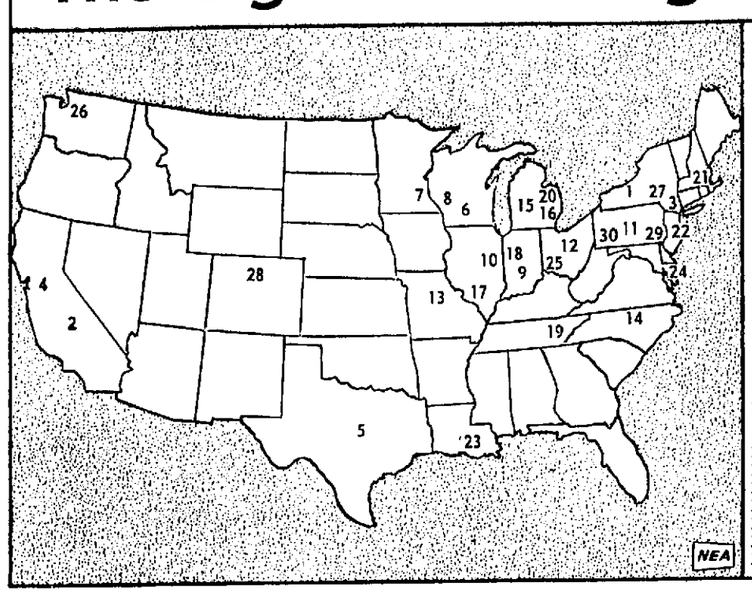

The current case— in which two Jews were sentenced to death and their sentences later commuted to 15-year prison terms, and seven other Jews and two Gentiles were given long prison sentences— recalls earlier Soviet trials involving mostly Jews. Those were the Jewish "doctors' plot" of the ealy 1950s, and the "economic trials" of the early 1960s. Many were executed, more than half of them Jews.

The more recent Jewish difficulties have grown out of the Soviet government's anti-Israel policy.

Thousands of Soviet Jews have sought exit permits to emigrate to Israel, but with few exceptions these applications have been turned down.

"It is clear that the immediate purpose of the arrests and accompanying trials is to stifle the voices of Jews who in the last year have undertaken to struggle to leave the U.S.S.R. for Israel where they can maintain their Jewish identity," says the American Jewish Conference on Soviet Jewry.

In spite of higher costs and widespread campus unrest in the past, students again have enrolled in record numbers at U.S. colleges and universities. Figures from 1,185 accredited schools show there are 4,484,031 full-time students. When part-timers are added, grand total comes to 6,048,496. Map shows how top 30 schools line up. Theological schools formed the only group showing a decline in full-time enrollments, dropping 5.6 per cent.

Asserts Black Power as Ugly as White Power

By DONALD M. McNICOLL
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Roman Catholic bishops in Britain have published and given wide distribution to a pamphlet asserting that war is necessary in some cases and that black power is "no less ugly than white power."

The pamphlet, called "Statement Concerning Moral Issues," was published Thursday after extensive consultation between the bishops and Catholic lay groups. It touches on many problems facing Christians in modern society, including abortion, pornography, sex, euthanasia (mercy killing) and race relations.

It says defensive war against an aggressor is justifiable but emphasizes that a Christian's duty is to work for peace and to heal divisions among men.

It condemns the use of weapons of mass destruction but asserts: "It is impossible for the church to declare that no Christian has a right to defend his country."

The pamphlet also condemns white-majority racism, but adds: "A minority also can be racist. Black power is no less ugly than white power. Discrimination of blacks against other blacks, or pinks against yellows, is no less repugnant to Catholic teaching."

It says violent dissent in Britain cannot be excused, but it does not rule out the use of violent protest in all circumstances or in all countries.

"It will not do merely to condemn the use of violence against authority, since evidently those in authority may themselves be guilty of worse violence in the legislation they enforce," the pamphlet says.

Although violence may sometimes be necessary as a last resort, the bishops say, hijacking and kidnaping can never be morally justified.

On another subject, the pamphlet says pornography in Britain is becoming so outrageous that public opinion may swing toward favoring a total ban.

The booklet describes as "unworthy of a Christian" the use of drugs and alcohol simply as a means of escape from reality.

On sex and marriage, it observes: "It is a lopsided view of marriage to think of it only as a means of reproduction in order to continue the human race ... The act of sex is the act of love. Married love harmonizes (marriage's emotional and reproductive) aspects in the context of the family."

Named Clerk of Pulaski

Hughes Sued by Former Top Man

By MORT SALTZMAN
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. AP) — The ousted chief of Howard Hughes' $300 million casino and land empire in Nevada has filed a $50 million law suit against his former boss and demanded that Hughes appear personally for testimony.

Robert A. Maheu said Thursday his pact for life employment was breached. The suit called for the billionaire, who has not been seen in public since the mid-1950s, to appear in the office of Maheu's attorney, Morton Galane, here Jan. 11 to give testimony.

Whether Maheu can force Hughes to appear without having him subpoenaed probably will have to be resolved by a court.

The suit also called for a jury trial but Maheu made no mention of trying to regain his job. Executives of Hughes Tool Co. fired Maheu Dec. 5 and on Dec. 19 a court upheld their contention that they had Hughes' consent to do so.

Maheu said he and Hughes agreed in 1967 that as long as Maheu lived he would receive $520,000 a year and have full control of Hughes' Nevada operations.

Maheu had said previously the agreement was oral.

Maheu's suit was described as a counterclaim to a court action by the tool company which sought a permanent injunction against Maheu acting for Hughes interests and asked unspecified damages.

The Maheu suit, asking $25 million compensatory and $25 million punitive damages, bore no relation to a possible appeal of the Dec. 19 court action, Galane said.

Fired Because of Hair Style

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Ivan Whiting, 20, of Little Rock and another young man picketed the Little Rock Post Office Thursday with signs claiming that Whiting had been fired from a post office job because of his hair style.

Postmaster Roy L. Sharpe said no Post Office employe ever had been dismissed because of the style or length of the employe's hair. He declined to say why Whiting was fired.

Dismissal of Suit Asked by Doctor

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Dr. John M. Hundley of Little Rock asked U.S. District Court Thursday to dismiss a suit in which an insurance company seeks to recover $500,000 paid to him.

The St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co. filed the suit over funds paid to Hundley, an orthopedic surgeon, in settlement of a damage case stemming from a traffic accident in Little Rock in 1966.

St. Paul said it agreed to the settlement because Hundley represented that he was totally and permanently disabled, but he resumed practicing medicine and surgery after the settlement.

Hundley's attorney filed a motion Thursday saying St. Paul's suit should have included as plaintiffs James H. Penick Sr. and Worthen Bank & Trust Co. Penick is the bank's board chairman and drove one of the cars involved in the accident.

When Penick and the bank are brought into the action as plaintiffs, federal court jurisdiction would no longer exist, since they exist in Arkansas, and therefore the suit would have to be dismissed, Hundley's motion said.

Thinks Too Many Getting Education

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Council on Education says most graduate schools are doing a good job with students but warns perhaps they're educating too many.

In a report released Thursday, the council said: "Doubts must be entertained whether the addition of more quality faculties and programs in areas of relatively abundant production of traditional Ph.D. degrees can be either justified or supported."

The report is based on a survey of more than 6,000 scholars who rated faculties and programs in 36 fields of study at 130 graduate schools. It updates a similar report made five years ago.

The report showed three-fourths of the more than 1,600 programs surveyed had increases in their scores on quality of graduate faculty.

The data showed graduate faculties at the University of California at Berkeley, University of Chicago, Harvard University, University of Michigan, Stanford University and Yale University appear most frequently in the top five positions in various departments ranging from art history to zoology. The study did not cover some fields such as agriculture, education and professional schools.

The report makes no comparisons between institutions. It is designed to help prospective graduate students choose a school.

The report says there is a possibility that more than enough Ph.D.s can be trained "in the graduate programs of, say, 50 or so top-rated institutions" in the future.

Chubby Boys, Girls Catch More Colds

LONDON (AP) — Chubby boys and girls appear to catch more colds than children of average weight, researchers said today.

Doctors from Northampton General Hospital and the county child health department reported in the British Medical Journal on a study of 120 overweight children and 103 children of normal weight whose ages ranged from 3 months to 2 years.

The doctors found that more than a third of the overweight children had suffered from colds serious enough to require a physician's care, compared with less than a quarter of the thinner children.

The doctors said the link between weight and colds is uncertain but suggested three possibilities: that overweight leads to impaired breathing and difficulty in clearing the lungs, that extra pounds lessen the body's natural defenses against disease, and that fat babies are not breast-fed as long as thinner ones. Mother's milk seems to help babies fight disease, the doctors said.

Town Called 'Fear City' After Death

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The young woman's lips trembled and her eyes filled with tears.

"Please go away," she said. "We'll talk some other time. This involved a lot of people in this complex, and it really freaked them."

She spoke of Larry George, 20, a University of Missouri at Kansas City student, stabbed to death in his apartment by an intruder early New Year's Day.

George died of wounds in the chest, arms, neck and face. He, his roommate and a young woman were in the apartment following a New Year's Eve party that had just broken up.

Police said the intruder entered through the door, still unlocked, and attempted to rob the men and rape the young wman. George fought the man, and apparently injured him in the struggle.

Stretching north on a sidewalk for 150 yards from the six-apartment complex was a heavy trail of blood, believed left by the fleeing assailant. Police said they were holding for questioning a man with a knife wound in the left hand.

Residents of the complex, occupied largely by young people, remained to themselves Friday. Most refused to comment on the slaying.

"Nobody will talk to you today," said a handyman who had come to clean George's apartment. "Come back tomorrow. We've got a sick city. People here are scared."

The neighborhood, in midtown Kansas City, has had four rapes, two robberies and one abduction reported within a five-block area around the complex the past six months.

One young man, resident of another apartment complex nearby, described the area as quiet and peaceful. He said he often went for walks at night, and had seen nothing to frighten him.

After learning of the slaying, he said thoughtfully, "I guess I ought to get a new lock for my door."

Action on SS Promised in Two Months

WASHINGTON (AP) — Key members have promised the House will have a chance within two months to raise Social Security benefits for 26 million persons and revise the welfare system.

Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., of the Ways and Means Committee gave the assurance Thursday night as the last chance for action by the expiring Congress went down the drain. Mills' assurance was seconded by the senior Republican member of the committee, Rep. John W. Byrnes of Wisconsin.

Mills also hinted the Social Security increase may be larger than the 5 per cent voted by the House this year. The Senate voted a 10 per cent increase. But the Senate bill, containing 400 pages of changes in the law, reached the House only Thursday and leaders ruled out any chance of reconciling differences during the last three days of session.

The assurances of quick action by the next Congress came in an exchange between Mills and a committee member, Rep. Charles A. Vanik, D-Ohio, who said he obtained signatures of 100 House members on a petition urging Mills to accept key provisions of the Senate bill immediately.

These were the 10 per cent increase, a minimum Social Security payment of $100 a month, increases in the amount a recipient may earn without pension reduction, and in the minimum amounts paid aged, disabled and blind welfare recipients.

But Mills said it would be impossible in the time available to get Senate agreement on a few provisions of the voluminous bill and equally impossible to tackle compromises on the whole bulky measure.

Survey of Nursing Needs

LITTLE ROCK (AP) —A U. S. Public Health Service grant of $33,000 has been approved to finance a year-long survey of the needs of nursing service in Arkansas.

The grant was made to the Arkansas State Nurses Association. The survey, which will cover training facility needs, will be carried out by Miss Daphine D. Doster of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Nazi Generals' Peace Offer Was Ignored

By FRED COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — The British government ignored a peace offer made by top German generals who wanted to oust Hitler in 1940, hitherto secret government papers revealed today.

Britain's war cabinet spurned the offer because it thought it was a trick, according to documents made public after 30 years of secrecy imposed by British law.

As part of the deal, the papers said, the generals offered Britain peace if it would join Germany in "dealing with Russia."

The generals enlisted Pope Piux XII as a secret go-between to let the British know of the proposals. A message was passed through the Pope to Britain's minister at the Vatican and then to the British government January 1940.

But the war cabinet, suspecting a trick, decided not to pursue the overture.

The generals also offered to restore freedom to Poland and Czechoslovakia if Britain would join with them against the Soviet Union. They insisted on holding on to Austria, however.

They warned if their offer was rejected, a "very bitter and quite unscrupulous" offensive would be launched, the records said.

The British government insisted that if the generals were serious they should first oust Hitler and then send out new peace feelers, tactics with which the Pope agreed. But there was no further communication from the German side.

The records also revealed several other early peace initiatives, one of which led to Winston Churchill's writing a furious memo about "the ignominious king of Sweden."

In August 1940, King Gustav of Sweden wrote to King George VI of Britain to mediate with Hitler in secret. King George rejected the offer, and Churchill wrote to the British ambassador in Stockholm:

"I might add that the intrusion of the ignominious king of Sweden as a peacemaker after his desertion of Finland and Norway is singularly distasteful."

The records show that in December 1939, Britain and France agreed to send regular troops in the guise of volunteers to help Finland in its war against Russia. But the real purpose of the force was to seize Swedish iron ore deposits, denying vital supplies to the Germans, the documents say.

Records released Thursday also showed that British diplomats feared President Franklin D. Roosevelt sought peace with the Axis in 1940 to get a Democrat re-elected to the White House.

The controversy arose over a tour of Axis capitals by then U.S. Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles. Roosevelt dispatched Welles to sound out the possibilities of halting World War II, which the United States had not yet entered.

Sir Robert Vansittart, the chief diplomatic adviser to the British government at the time, said in a memorandum to the Foreign Office: "It is now pretty clear ... that President Roosevelt is ready to play a dirty trick on the world and risk the ultimate destruction of the Western democracies in order to secure the re-election of a Democratic candidate in the United States."

97 Killed During Cong Cease-fire

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — Heavy fighting broke out inside Vietnam's Demilitarized Zone early today as the Viet Cong's New Year cease-fire entered its final hours.

Informed sources said the battle began when a South Vietnamese patrol clashed with a company of North Vietnamese troops just south of the DMZ and pursued it across the boundary.

The South Vietnamese were later reinforced by more forces, including armored personnel carriers, and supported by artillery and air strikes, Associated Press correspondent Holger Jensen reported from Da Nang.

The South Vietnamese were hit by mortar and rocket fire, but there was no report on casualties on either side. The South Vietnamese troops reportedly were pulled out of the DMZ in late afternoon.

No casualty reports were immediately available.

Meanwhile, unofficial figures showed at least 12 Americans killed and 49 wounded since the 72-hour Viet Cong cease-fire began Thursday morning. South Vietnamese casualties were listed as 32 men killed and 93 wounded.

Allied spokesmen said at least 53 enemy troops had been killed during the period, 21 by American fire and 32 by the South Vietnamese.

The Americans and South Vietnamese did not observe the Viet Cong cease-fire but declared their own 24-hour truce beginning at 6 p.m. Thursday. The allied cease-fire was one of the quietest ever, with one American and nine South Vietnamese reported killed and 10 Americans and 52 South Vietnamese reported wounded.

Twenty-five enemy soldiers were reported killed and two captured over the 24 hours.

A year ago, the allies' 24-hour New Year's truce period saw six Americans and 25 South Vietnamese killed and 11 Americans and 74 South Vietnamese wounded.

U of C Rating Jeopardized by Riots

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — The University of California has compiled the best ratings in the American Council on Education's new survey of 130 graduate schools, but campus turmoil and budget pressure jeopardize that stature, the Berkeley chancellor says.

"We are slipping competitively with other schools, especially the ones compared in the ACE report," said Roger W. Heyns, whose resignation as chancellor after more than five years was submitted Nov. 13. He is serving while a successor is sought.

The council's report, released Thursday, involved a survey of more than 6,000 scholars who rated faculties and programs in 36 fields of study.

Three-fourth of the programs surveyed were scored higher than they were in a similar survey five years ago.

Berkeley rated among the top five on 32 of the 35 programs where it was surveyed. Harvard rated in the top five on 27 of 34.

Holiday Traffic Deaths

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The nation's traffic death toll for the New Year's weekend reached 189 today.

Snow ended for the most part after the first big storm of the winter in the northeast, but rural roads remained snow-covered in many areas. Light snow fell in the northern and central Rockies and over the Great Lakes. Highways were clear and dry in most other sections.

The traffic death count began 6 p.m., local time Thursday and will end at midnight Sunday

Words & Music

The library opens up the world for a child

"A good book is the best of friends, the same today and forever." Perhaps, in these days of noise and haste, more than ever. Books are friends who talk quietly to our inner ear, who cannot force themselves upon us if we do not choose to seek them out.

Libraries are places where the lover of books lingers, as one does on a visit to a friend's house. Today libraries offer phonograph records and films, as well as books, to borrow for use outside the library. But there is nothing quite like actually being in the library itself, with endless pleasures of browsing open to the susceptible who are lured into undreamed of fields of discovery and enchantment. The library is also a serious workshop for students, researchers and the specialist who comes to look at a unique edition of some revered masterpiece.

In New York, a city of noise and crowds and material wealth, the public libraries offer another kind of reality which has a very special value. For many, the libraries are not just good friends, they are the indispensable companions of daily life in the city. The photographs on this page show some quiet moments of companionship with the libraries' words and music.

Spending in Campaigns Under Study

By BILL SIMMONS
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK (AP) —Aides to Gov.-elect Dale Bumpers, who has pledged legislation to limit political campaign spending, are looking at an Oregon law under which that state's attorney general was almost barred from office.

Charles D. Matthews, an attorney and former state Democratic party chairman, and Thomas Glaze, an attorney and founder of The Election Laws Institute, have spoken well of the Oregon law.

Neither they nor Bumpers, however, have given details of any spending-limiting proposal in the drafting stage for Arkansas, but all insist that present state statutes are inadequate.

Arkansas once had a law that limited expenditures in political campaigns to no more than twice the salary of the office sought by the candidate, but that law has been repealed. While it existed, enforcement didn't.

At that time, and under current campaign spending laws, no responsibility for initiating legal action against offenders was specified. The responsibility for enforcing election laws is specifically assigned under the Oregon law.

The Oregon statute imposes an over-all spending limit of 15 per cent of the office's salary for candidates in party primaries and 10 per cent of the office's salary for general election candidates.

There also is a limit of $2,000 on the amount a candidate may spend from his personal funds in his quest for election.

The Oregon law also has some stringent requirements for reporting of campaign expenditures and the contributions a candidate receives. Matthews said strong laws on reporting contributions could be the best method of limiting spending.

"Spending would drop drastically if candidates had to tell where they got their money, but I believe that might be better because it might add more democracy to our election process," he said.

In Oregon, Atty. Gen. Lee Johnson, a Republican, defeated incumbent Robert Y. Thornton in the November 1968 general election, but Thornton filed suit accusing Johnson of spending more than the $2,000 limit and filing an expenditure report after the deadline had passed.

Johnson had filed a report by the deadline, but had failed to have it notarized. By the time he submitted a notarized copy, the deadline, which was the 15th day after the election, had expired.

An Oregon Circuit Court barred Johnson from office, but, after he had been refused to serve for four months, higher courts held that he acted in good faith and should be permitted to take office.

When Arkansas had a spending limitation, candidates circumvented it by the simple expedient of having "committees" spending money in their behalf.

However, the Oregon law requires that committees also report expenditures and whatever contributions they receive.

The Oregon statute also bars political contributions by banks, insurance companies, telephone companies, natural gas companies, electric companies, truck companies, railroads and other types of businesses.

Contributions by officers and employes of such companies are permitted, and such individuals may also work in behalf of a candidate, provided that they do it "own their own time."

The Oregon law further defines contributions as anything received of a value of more than $5. Many "contributions" as Arkansas politics currently exist — such as the loan of cars for use by candidates — pass unnoticed generally.

There is no problem about getting to four spades with any method of bidding. We have shown the JACOBY MODERN method in the box with North giving a strong but nonforcing limit jump raise.

How about the play of the hand? South should take the spade finesse. You finesse for the king when you hold 10 cards in the suit. The finesse loses and let's assume that West continues hearts.

South has lost a trump trick and will lose a club trick eventually. How can he get away with the loss of just one trick in diamonds?

One may to eliminate all clubs and hearts from the combined hands and then play ace and a second diamond. That will win if there is a singleton honor or a doubleton king-queen. It will also win if either defender holds an honor and one small. If so, he will be endplayed and forced to give declarer a ruff and discard.

Neither play will work, but that doesn't mean that South shouldn't make his contract. The correct way to play diamonds is to work with the clubs. South simply leads a low club from dummy. If East is smart enough to hop up with the king and lead a diamond, South plays low. West takes his king, but South has a finesse against the queen.

If East plays low South will lead another club when next on lead and discard a diamond from dummy. Later on, he will discard another diamond on the club that has been set up and never lose even one diamond trick.

HELEN HELP US!

by Helen Bottel

YOUTH ASKED FOR IT!

This column is for young people, their problems and pleasures, their troubles and fun. As with the rest of Helen Help Us!, it welcomes laughs but won't dodge a serious question with a brush-off.

Send your teenage questions to YOUTH ASKED for it, care of Helen Help Us! this newspaper.

THE GHOST BETWEEN

Dear Helen:

I went with this guy three years. I'll soon be 18 and he 21. We were always trying to find a way we could get married, but my parents wouldn't sign. So we finally took the last chance and I got pregnant.

Wonderful – I thought! But it didn't turn out that way. Too many pressures, I guess. So we didn't get married. I went away, had a beautiful little girl and gave her up, because I couldn't possibly provide for her. I'm sorry now, but there's no way to get her back.

After I came home, the father said he still loves me and wants us to get married. He wasn't ready for responsibility then. Is he now? I feel something for him, but I'm not sure if it's love or because I had his baby. – HELP

Dear Help:

I think there are too many bad memories for this marriage (if it actually happens) to ever be successful. I'm sure you agree, or you wouldn't have asked me. – H.

Dear Helen:

Many kids who don't go in for sports think coaches are cruel. There's even a book out now that makes football coaches out to be pretty inhuman. I'd like to give you the other side of the picture.

WHAT IS A COACH?

During high school and college, there are men in the physical education department known as coaches. These men combine all their knowledge and skill with other men, to turn a bunch of awkward kids into a good team.

A coach is the man who, in the beginning of the season, works you and never lets you have a rest. When he says something he means it, and if it is not carried out, he yells for hours. He is the slavedriver to some, the "old man" to others. Yet after the season is over, he is the nicest guy in school.

He can also be the best friend you ever had. He is the all knowing one, the one who takes you from depression to success.

Yet deep down inside, he is the softest, most compassionate man you'll ever meet. He cares for each player and knows what to do or say when you've got troubles. He's always there, ready to listen.

I know! – MEMBER OF THE FOOTBALL TEAM

Dear Helen:

A reader asked how the "G" string got its name. Here's what I read recently:

An early stripteaser named Carrie Finell whose gimmick was to gyrate her torso and cause a tassle to revolve in time to music, once dropped her scanty wardrobe on the dressing room table. Becuase it formed the letter "G", she called it "G-string" and it's been that ever since. – HELPFUL READER

Dear Reader:

Thanks friend. My readers always come through! – H

LEE MUELLER

Nothing So Sure As Whatsitsname

By LEE MUELLER
NEW YORK (NEA)

Now that the television industry has bowed to the warnings of the American Cancer Society and stopped cigarette commercials, many Americans are worrying about where their next anxiety is coming from. They needn't. It's here. It has been here all the time:

Death.

A reawakened interest in death appears to be developing across the nation among persons who value the mental health of those of us who live.

Dr. E. James Lieberman, a psychiatrist at Howard University School of Medicine, claims most Americans have been treating death like it isn't there and says this kind of reaction is begging for some serious psychological problems.

In Washington the other day, the city's largest newspaper pleaded, "We Must Get Death Back Into Perspective."

A study published by the Russell Sage Foundation recently declared that "it does not seem that we are much inclined to obey Freud's injunction, 'To endure life, prepare for death.' Rather, many of us appear to gaze upon death with a frozen stare, as if it were not there, or as if we were looking through a pane of glass at something of which we were not a part."

The idea is not exactly new. In 1959, Muriel Spark wrote a book entitled, "Memento Mori." The Latin words mean, "Remember that thou must die."

Apparently too many Americans are forgetting it. Now our social scientists have leaped upon the subject and linked our attitudes toward death with (what else?) the "social deviance and disorganization that pervade our society."

Nobody talks about grave subjects at the dinner table these days. Death, it seems, has replaced sex as the social taboo. Conscientious hostesses think twice before serving angel food cake.

This refusal to look death straight in the eye, says Dr. Lieberman, can lead to all sorts of problems—subconscious conflicts related to severe depression or pathological behavior.

"Nobody tries to prepare us for death any more," he said, "except the friendly insurance man or funeral home . . . most of the messages we get premise (not promise) everlasting life on earth—in soft, clean, hairless, deodorized, fragrant original skin."

Lieberman says our failure to face death can be attributed to several things:

- It's harder for Americans to face death as directly as they once did. The emphasis now is on living life, the future. Many no longer believe in the salving concept of an afterlife. So one now has to face death straight on, without aids of any kind, and many Americans are lost or trying to escape by "copping out"—that is, trying to avoid the emotional pain of death.
- Nonemotionalism more and more is becoming a cherished and respected fact of life in the culture.
- The media—in particular, television—have made dying seem almost frivolous and not the human tragedy that it is.

The future of death in America, in cold statistics, does not look promising, either—regardless of what you think of the H-bomb and pollution. Fewer people are dying.

During the first 50 years of this century, normal life expectancy increased from 40 to 70 years. Now, more than nine out of 10 children born alive will remain that way until they're 40. And whereas half the population used to die before 40, half now live beyond the age of 70.

Says Living Things Came From Dirty Ice

CHICAGO (AP) — Pioneering experiments suggest that living creatures on earth—and conceivably elsewhere in the universe—in effect evolved from chips off the "dirty ice" of interstellar space, a New York scientist reported today.

"Dirty ice" is the pet name given by space scientists to super-cold grains of solid matter suspended in the thin gases that pervade the space between the stars.

Known to play an important role in the condensation processes leading to the formation of the stars and planets, the pip-squeak dirty ice particles are believed by some scientists to consist mainly of frozen water, methane and ammonia. Their "dirtiness" comes from a small admixture of heavier elemets such as iron.

Dr. J. Mayo Greenberg of the State University of New York at Albany said there's at least suggestive new evidence that the heavenly grains may be potential yielders of some of the basic chemicals of life itself.

In a report prepared for the closing session of the American Association for the Advancement of Science's 137th meeting and amplified at a news conference he gave this account:

In the world's first experiment of its kind, Greenberg and several space-science colleagues reproduced a laboratory version of dirty ice by deep-freezing a mixture of water, ammonia and methane at nearly 300 degrees below zero.

Then they bombarded the dirty ice with ultraviolet radiation to further simulate space conditions.

Finally, they evaporated the mixture, studied the resultant gases with a spectroscope—and found a variety of complex organic molecules, "resembling those of biological interest."

Most exciting, said Greenberg, one of the molecules closely resembled molecules of a cyanide-acetylene mixture recently discovered in interstellar space by a researcher of the government's National Radio Astronomy Observatory at Green Bank, W. Va.

The implication, said Greenberg, is that the grains of dirty ice in interstellar space "contain rather complex molecules, a significant fraction of which are possibly of biological significance."

Norman Rockwell: Color Him 'Blase'

By LEE MUELLER

NEW YORK (NEA)

It would not surprise anyone to find Norman Rockwell living in rural Massachusetts in a 150-year-old white frame house that once belonged to Aaron Burr. Neither should it surprise anyone that Rockwell's studio in the back yard appears to be a converted red New England barn—which it is.

"It looks like him," says his secretary, Dorothy McGregor. "Mr. Rockwell is a part of the America that a lot of people loved."

The America that Rockwell touched upon for 50 years as cover illustrator for the late Saturday Evening Post was rich in smiles, flags, mother love and red barns. He painted 317 covers and only Santa Claus received more adoring fan mail.

"A great many people identify with Mr. Rockwell these days," said his secretary. "The demand for his work—and his mail—has increased tremendously, particularly in the last few years."

The last few years have been tough on smiles, flags, mother love and red barns. They also have been tough on Norman Rockwell—but not as tough as you might think.

"Something funny has happened," he said in a recent interview. "I'm 76 years old and all of a sudden everything that they've brushed under the rug all my life has come out, and they can't brush it under again."

Things have changed. Rockwell's "Four Freedoms" series of World War II was his patriotic monument and, he says, it is likely to remain so. "You couldn't paint them now," he said. "All those subjects are out."

It might surprise a few people to learn that during his

a sense of security he didn't feel

long career at the easel, Norman Rockwell has been depicting life as his readers and editors wished to see it—not necessarily as Norman Rockwell wished to see it.

"I think I was trying to express a sense of security that I didn't feel—that everybody loves each other," he said. "In a way, I regret it.

"If I could only be an activist and have a definite feeling for something and be willing to die for it . . . instead I'm—not sophisticated, that's not the word—but blase. If I get an idea and a magazine wants it, I do it."

If the magazine didn't want it, Norman Rockwell didn't do it. There were no blacks in his portraits of ordinary Americans for the Post, he said, "because George Horace Lorimer, who was a very liberal man, told me never to show colored people except as servants."

Look magazine has published Rockwell regularly since the Post folded and permits him more latitude. "I've done several racial pictures—little girls being taken to school by marshals, colored kids moving into white neighborhoods, that sort of thing," he said.

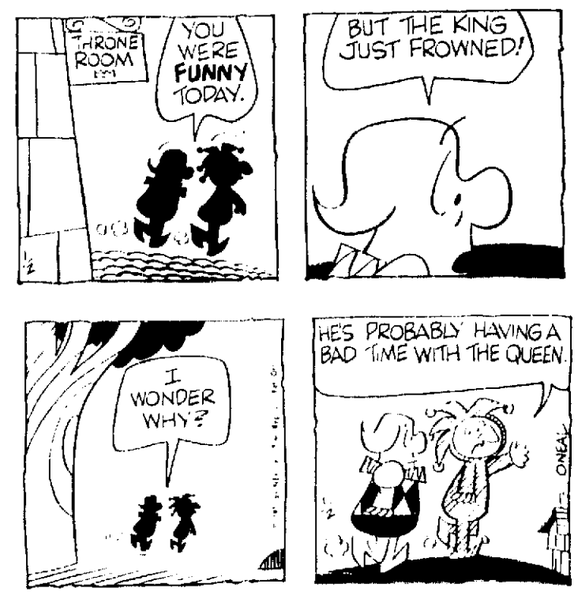

Rockwell was born Norman Percevel in New York on Feb. 3, 1894. His parents were amateur painters, so he and his younger brother, Jarvis, were encouraged to draw.

At 13, he began studying art. At 16, his art teacher was getting him magazine assignments. Soon, Rockwell was earning $50 a month as art editor of Boy's Life, a position that required him to drop out of high school.

Rockwell married when he was 22, just after selling his first cover to the Post. It showed a disgusted boy pushing a baby carriage while his friends were trotting off to play baseball.

"A lot of things have happened to this country since that cover," he said, not smiling.

QUICK QUIZ

Q—What does the Bible record as the last feat of Samson?

A—Samson's pulling down of a large building by its two pillars on the heads of the Philistines.

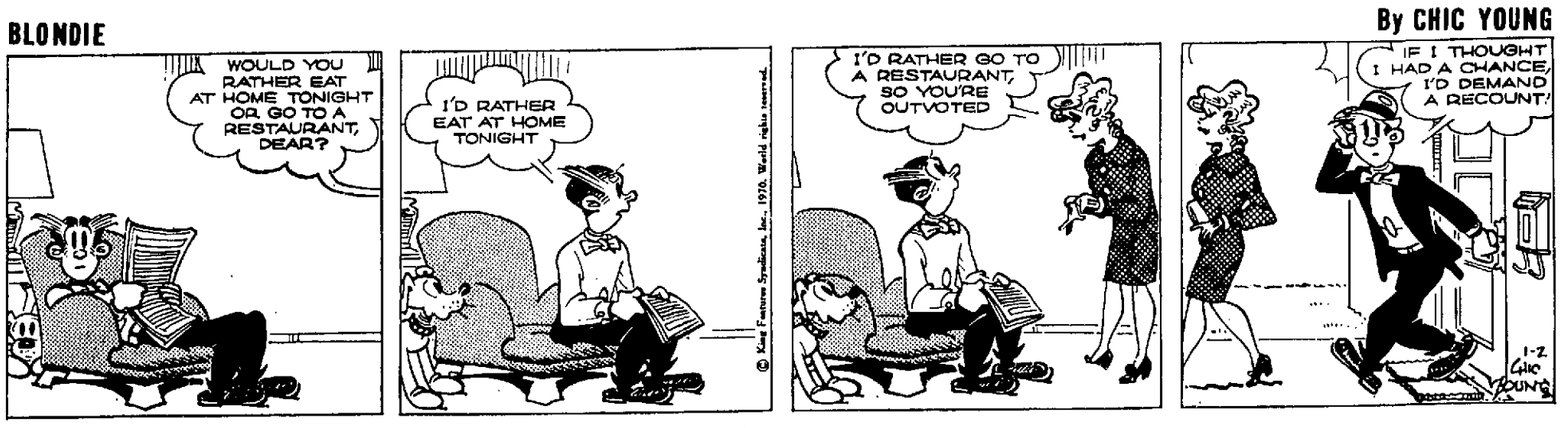

Q—What is the meaning of the name Arnold?

A—This German name means "strong as an eagle."

Q—Is a starfish really a fish?

A—No. It is an animal, but is called a fish because it lives in the sea.

Top Teams Beaten in Bowl Games

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Texas' Darrell Royal had the blues today. Ara Parseghian of Notre Dame had satisfaction and hope. Nebraska's Bob Devaney had an undefeated season and the inside track to the No. 1 ranking among the major college football teams.

Meanwhile, Ohio State's Woody Hayes could ponder a "mad dog."

These feelings were the aftermath of the annual New Year's Day bowl madness that saw Notre Dame upset Texas 24-11 in the Cotton Bowl, Nebraska withstand Louisiana State 17-12 in the Orange Bowl and Ohio State get upset by Stanford 27-17 in the Rose Bowl.

In Friday's other action, Tennessee whipped the Air Force 34-13. The Gator Bowl between Mississippi and Auburn and the East-West Shrine Game were on tap today.

"I feel miserable and I know I'll feel even more miserable tomorrow," said Royal after watching his top-ranked Longhorns lose after 30 straight victories.

"That's what winning streaks are for ... to break," said Parseghian, whose once-beaten, sixth-ranked Fighting Irish still have hopes of being voted the top spot in the final Associated Press poll next week.

However, with the first defeats of Texas and second-ranked Ohio State, the inside track to the final No. 1 ranking belongs to Devaney's third-ranked Cornhuskers who finished with 11 victories and a tie.

"We're the only undefeated team," said Devaney. "I can't see how the Pope himself could vote for Notre Dame."

Hayes, summing up his Buckeyes' setback, observed: "Either team could have won it until we got stopped at their 20 and they hit that mad dog pass on our two."

It was a 35-yard completion by a harried Jim Plunkett that put Stanford on the Ohio State two and set up the touchdown that put the Indians ahead 20-17.

All the Cotton Bowl scoring took place in the first half, with Notre Dame's All-America quarterback Joe Theisman passing 26 yards to Tom Gatewood for one touchdown and scoring on runs of three and 15 yards.

Theisman's three-yard touchdown run was set up following Notre Dame's first touchdown when the Irish recovered a fumbled kickoff on the Texas 10. It was one of five fumbles the Longhorns lost.

Jim Bertelsen ran two yards for Texas' touchdown and Happy Feller of the Longhorns and Scott Hempel of the Irish traded field goals.

Trailing 12-10 in the fourth quarter, Nebraska marched to its winning touchdown over tough LSU, with quarterback Jerry Tagge scoring from the one.

LSU had gone ahead with nine points in the third quarter on a 25-yard field goal by Mark Lumpkin and a 31-yard touchdown pass from Buddy Lee to Al Coffee.

Nebraska built a 10-3 halftime lead on a 26-yard field goal by Paul Rogers and Joe Orduna's three-yard run. Lumpkin booted a three-pointer for LSU's first-half points.

Ohio State fell behind 10-1, fought to a 14-10 lead but then wilted under the passing of Plunkett, the Heisman Trophy winner as the outstanding college player of the season.

Following the "mad dog pass," Jackie Brown scored from a yard out to put Stanford ahead. Plunkett, who completed 20 of 30 passes for 265 yards, then clinched the victory with a 16-yard scoring strike to Randy Vataha.

Stanford built a 10-0 first-quarter lead on Brown's four-yard touchdown run and Steve Horowitz' 37-yard field goal. Ohio State rebounded on a pair of one-yard touchdown runs by John Brockington.

Fourth-ranked Tennessee had little trouble beating the Air Force behind the passing of Bobby Scott, who threw for 288 yards and a touchdown. Don McLeary scored two Tennessee touchdowns on runs of five and 20 yards and Bobby Majors returned a punt 57 yards for another. Bob Parker passed for one Air Force touchdown and Darryl Haas recovered Scott's fumble in the end zone for the other.

Sanders Leads All-Pro Voting

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK (NEA) The National Football Conference placed 16 men on the NEA All-Pro first team as selected by the team captains on all NFL squads.

Charley Sanders of Detroit, at tight end, was the top vote-getter.

The NFC was honored with eight men on the first-team offensive unit and eight on the defensive. This, in fact, reflected the the balance in contests played between the two leagues during the season. The NFC held a 27-12-1 edge.

John Brodie of San Francisco was substantially ahead of Bob Griese of Miami for the quarterback spot. The voting was closer, however, for the running back positions. Larry Brown of Washington and MacArthur Lane of St. Louis were followed closely by Ron Johnson of the Giants and Mel Farr of Detroit.

For several years, Jim Otto of Oakland and Mick Tingelhoff of Minnesota have dominated the all-star voting at center for their respective leagues. Now, in the first combined NEA all-pro team, Otto comes out on top.

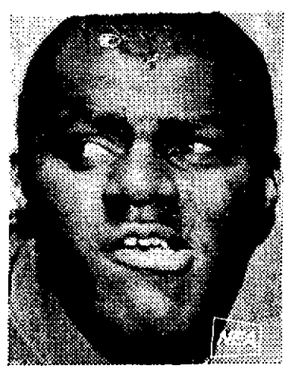

Guard Walt Sweeney of San Diego and tackle Jim Tyrer of Kansas City are the other two American Conference players on the offensive first team.

Wide receiver was interesting in that Dick Gordon won it, and Paul Warfield almost did. Gordon wasn't even sure of a job with the Bears when the season began. Bear officials thought he should catch more passes and dress more conservatively. He improved on the former. Warfield had been traded from Cleveland to Miami, and set out immediately to prove to the Browns that they had let go of a prize. Although he missed several games with a shoulder injury, Warfield was the long bomb threat in the startling rise of the Dolphins to a play-off berth.

Wide receiver Gene Washington of San Francisco and tackles Bob Brown of Los Angeles and Gale Gillingham of Green Bay round out the first team on offense.

Two of Minnesota's Purple Gang lead the all-pro defensive team. End Carl Eller and tackle Alan Page line up with Rich Jackson, end, of Denver and Merlin Olsen, tackle, of Los Angeles to provide a fearsome front four. A surprise on the second team at tackle is a relative unknown, Manny Fernandez of the Miami Dolphins.

Nasty Dick Butkus is the middle linebacker. He was selected by a comfortable margin over Kansas City's Willie Lanier.

Alan Page

Besides Rich Jackson, the AFC was represented on defense by two players from Kansas City. They are Bobby Bell, corner linebacker, and Johnny Robinson, halfback.

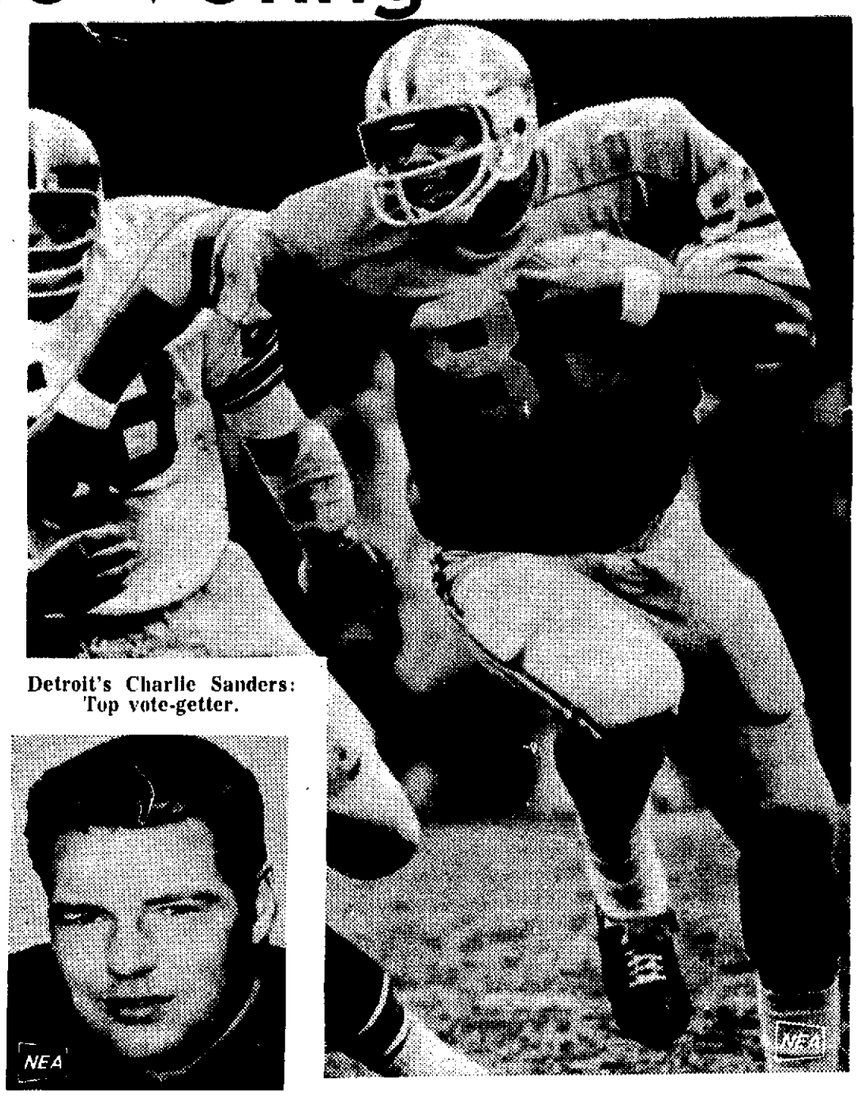

San Francisco led all teams by placing four men on the squad. Besides Washington and Brodie, the 49ers are represented with Jim Johnson at defensive halfback and Dave Wilcox at corner linebacker.

St. Louis placed two men on the defensive unit—safety Larry Wilson and halfback Roger Wehrli.

The NEA All-Players All-Pro team, selected with the cooperation of the NFL Players Association, will be honored at the annual presentation ceremonies in CBS' Television City, Hollywood, on Thursday, Jan. 21. The program, for which singer Glen Campbell will be the master of ceremonies, will be taped and shown as a half-hour special on the CBS television network preceding the Pro Bowl game on Jan. 24.

The players will receive individual statuettes, sculpted by NEA editorial cartoonist Bill Crawford, to honor their selection to the all-pro team and will also be presented with engraved Bulova watches.

'Unsung Heroes'--Every Year a Moment in Sun

BALTIMORE — (NEA) — Frequently the unknown athlete has been neglected from the sporting scene—except in Maryland, where a tradition has been established to honor annually the unsung heroes on football and lacrosse teams.

This concept was originated in Baltimore in 1940 by the late Charles P. McCormick, head of a leading spice and extract firm. McCormick decided to honor unsung heroes in order "to stress the importance of sharing responsibility and to encourage skill, courage, courtesy, gentlemanly conduct, cooperation and unselfishness among members of a team."

Each year since 1940, there has been a parade of unsung heroes from each high school in the Greater Baltimore area at an annual banquet held at the McCormick Building. From among each group, a McCormick Unsung Hero of the Year has been selected. Last year (December, 1969) the winner was Michael Kavanagh of Patterson High School, the first quarterback to be selected in the Unsung Hero Award's 30-year history. Traditionally, it had gone to linemen or blockers.

Brooks Robinson

Kavanagh also achieved another first at last year's dinner. He was the initial recipient of the $2,000 McCormick Unsung Hero Scholarship Award. It also happened that Kavanagh was the last person to receive the Unsung Hero Award personally from McCormick, who died last June.

However, the McCormick Unsung Hero Award had become such a tradition on the Maryland scene that McCormick and Co. decided that the awards and scholarship will be continued annually, a decision announced at the 1969 Awards Dinner. The 1970 Dinner will be held this month.

A long list of sports luminaries has attended the dinthe teamwork philosophy. In fact, Brooks Robinson, third baseman for the Baltimore Orioles, who was named the outstanding player in the 1970 World Series, asked McCormick to allow him to contribute a permanent trophy each year to be kept by the school which the winner attended.

This year's speaker and honored guest will be Weeb Ewbank, former coach of the Baltimore Colts and now general manager and coach of the New York Jets.

Other speakers through the years have included Red Smith, Bill Veeck, Forrest Evashevski, Joe Garigiola, Art Donovan, Don Shula, and Eddie Erdelatz.

Thornton to Retain Two

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Atty. Gen.-elect Ray Thornton said Thursday that he will retain Rodney Parham and Michael K. Wilson as heads of the attorney general's office opinions and litigations sections.

Thornton also said he would keep Henry Ginger, Garner Taylor Jr. and Milton Lueken, who have been part of the staff developed by outgoing Atty. Gen. Joe Purcell.

By MURRAY OLDERMAN

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. — (NEA) — At the age of 35, the ultimate pay-off as a professional football player has come to John Brodie. More satisfying, spiritually, than the $827,000 he got not to create waves when the war between the leagues was settled (John had signed to jump to the Houston Oilers). More stimulating, emotionally, than the close to six figures he gets annually as the quarterback of the San Francisco 49ers.

The veteran signal caller, the leading passer in the National Football Conference this year, was today named the winner of the 1970 Jim Thorpe Trophy as the most valuable player in professional football.

Brodie was chosen by a vote of players from the 26 teams in the National Football League. The poll was conducted by NEA with the cooperation of the NFL Players Association.

Brodie, in his 14th year with the 49ers, has completed his most satisfying season leading the team to its first division title in history. Almost diffidently, in being told he was honored by his peers as the NFL's top performer in 1970, he said: "No one guy can do that much. It's a reflection of what we've had here this season, by far the best team I've ever been on.

And in 1957, when he was a rookie out of Stanford playing behind Y. A. Tittle, the sparse-haired slinger was on a team which came within a play-off victory of reaching the NFL championship game. It was the start of a generally frustrating career infrequently marred by injury, often gutted in defeat. The Bets during his 12 pro years finished in last place three times, most recently last fall when his arm went bad on him.

"I compounded the problems," admitted Brodie, "by never finding the source of the bad arm, although I continued to play."

And yet, with a winter and spring of rest, he came back to throw more completions for more yards and more touchdowns (24) than any quarterback in the NFL. So what about his aging arm?

"Obviously," he said, "it's not as strong as when I was a kid. But the distance isn't what you really need. It's the speed with which you throw. And knowing where you throw.

"At the age of 35, you know more about what's going on."

Brodie also knows, finally, acceptance by a Kezar Stadium audience which has been critical of his performance, challenged his dedication and sided with several challengers for his job over the years.

"I never thought I wanted to quit," he mused. "I couldn't see where there was a better way to go. I was never disenchanted with San Francisco. It's where I come from and it has always been home."

Another veteran quarterback across the Bay, George Blanda, age 43, of the Oakland Raiders, was the only serious competitor to Brodie in the voting.

The San Francisco quarterback will receive the Jim Thorpe Trophy, donated by the Seamless Company, at the annual all-pro party hosted by CBS and NEA at Television City on Jan. 21. The presentation will be taped and seen on a half-hour television special over the CBS network preceding the Pro Bowl game on Jan. 24.
